Red - the colour of passion. No issue of late has been played out more passionately than the recent closure of a brewery on the West Coast. So passionately that the corporation involved buckled and re-opened the brewery.

It is an on-going conflict not only between big business and the little guy but also the parallel push towards globalization against the retention of regionalism. A similar saga of passion simmers for our local brewery on the North Island east coast. And now the Commerce Commission has joined in with its' investigation, keeping the big boys honest. The works in this exhibition add to the debate. Cheers.
